CHOKED SYRIAN BRIDE.

About two weeks ago, two Syrians, Robert Hamam and Miss Lillie Khouri, were joined in marriage in the court house in Mayfield, with Judge J. W. Monroe officiating. The couple left that afternoon for Fulton, where they had been making their home since coming across the waters. A surprise awaited the couple as they reached Fulton. The mother and sister-in-law of the groom, so it is said, attacked the new bride, choking, beating and humiliating her, causing her and husband to become separated on the spot. Relatives of the groom prevented the couple from even seeing each other and it seems were instrumental in sending the bride to Hickman so that Robert Hamam, the groom of a few hours, could not see her.

Another chapter to the story now develops and it promises to be quite interesting. On the day of the marriage, Dr. M. W. Rozzell was appointed in county court, guardian of the girl and gave his consent for her marriage. The groom has decided that he wants his wife with him, where he can better look after her and protect her from possible harm from his parents and has asked Dr. Rozzell for assistance in finding the bride. The guardian has written the county officials of Fulton county, relating the circumstances and if the girl is not sent here in the next few days then it is likely that some persons will be arrested charged with kidnapping. It is said that the relatives of Hamam are mad at the girl because she married their relative, thinking that she would not be able to carry out her promise to repay them for funds sent her in Syria to pay her way to this country. The girl has not been across from the "old country" but a few weeks and cannot speak but a few words of the English language. She is but 18 years old and her father is dead.—Mayfield Messenger.

Thus far Fulton county authorities have not been asked to surrender the girl. She is staying at present at the home of Faria Nalfeh, her brother-in-law.

Word was received here Monday that Mrs. C. S. Driver's sister died at her home at Walnut Ridge, Ark. Mrs. Driver was called to the young lady's bedside about three weeks ago, and was with her when the end came.

WATSON DROPS DEAD.

Russell Watson, a well known farmer residing 5 miles southwest of this city, on the Dyersburg road, dropped dead Friday afternoon about four o'clock. Heart disease is assigned as the cause of his death.

Mr. Watson was 68 years old. He is survived by his wife and two adopted children—Mrs. Joe Smith, and a son. Funeral services were held at the Brownsville church Saturday morning, after which the remains were laid to rest at the City Cemetery. Deceased was a man of high standing in the community in which he resided, a good citizen, and has a host of friends who will mourn his loss.

This is Water street, both in name and appearance, at rear of business houses. N. C. & St. L. tracks are on this street.

W. C. Reed spent Sunday in Fulton with his parents.

McKee Johnson and Hearn Brown were in Union City Sunday.

Goalder Johnson was in Lexington on business first of the week.

Willard Richardson, who murdered John Violett in Carlisle county a few weeks ago, will probably be the first white man legally electrocuted as he is condemned to die April 19.

Rudy Davis, of Joppa, Ill., was drowned near Birds Point, Mo., Sunday afternoon, when a launch in which he was going to Charleston, capsized. Otto Laird and Samuel Tucker made their escape. They were in search of a half-brother of Davis, who was driven out of Mississippi county by the flood. The launch overturned when it struck the Iron Mountain track, which is submerged.

THE DOLLAR MARK.

The universal wall of the age is "the high cost of living." From every country and from every social stratum it rises like a dirge, spoiling the sunshine of content, souring the ambrosia of life.

And not only are the prices high, but there is more to buy; things that were luxuries are becoming necessities, luxuries that were unknown a decade ago are the commonplace exactations of today.

All of these things cost; and to meet the increased demand upon the purse there is a madder rush in the markets, a fiercer competition in the offices, a more uncompromising battle in the professions. The money-madness is in every brain, the get-rich fever is throbbing in every pulse.

Under this stinging lash men are beginning to have a hunted look—the dollar-mark face is a verily upon our streets and even in our homes.

In every crowd you will see it, the sharp, sinister, selfish stamp that money-grubbing leaves on the human countenance. It is undisguisable, unmistakable.

Men, still young in years are prematurely gray and stooped; women, who should still be soft-eyed and smooth of brow are seamed with wrinkles and hard of glance. It gets them all, this stamp of the money devil, and when it gets them it marks them indelibly.

In modern life there is no rest, no placidity. The dominant note is to outdo your neighbor, to have a finer house, costlier clothes, a bigger touring car. The dollar mark is becoming the sign of prominence and of things "at are 'first class'"; poverty is scarcely considered respectable. The poor in purse, not the poor in worth, are held to be the social outcasts. A man may lie and steal and betray, but if his dollar mark is big enough to cover the sin the world does not pause to investigate. When a poor man sins, he is left naked to condemnation; he cannot make the mystic dollar sign and hide behind it.

The high cost of modern living is not only the prices we pay for material things; it is the price we pay in lowered standards of ethics and ideals—it is the eating of the dollar-mark into our better natures.

WANTS C., M. & G. RY.

The Illinois Central Railroad Company wants control of the Chicago, Memphis & Gulf railroad, a line extending from Dyersburg to Tiptonville, Tenn., and Hickman, Ky.

Suit to compel the owners of the latter road to sell the property to the I. C. has been filed in the United States district court at Memphis. The I. C. company claims it furnished part of the supplies for the extension of the new line from Tiptonville to Hickman, also rails when the road was built from Tiger Tail, Tenn. to Tiptonville.

Two years ago this road, then known as the Dyersburg Northern, was sold to John Watkins, of Memphis and New York, S. G. Latta and others, for $350,000. Latta was elected president and announced that the road would be extended to a point on the Ohio river opposite Metropolis, Ill., and from Dyersburg to Memphis then to Jackson, Miss., where a connection would be made with the New Orleans & Great Northern, giving them an entrance to the gulf.

Later it became known that the Burlington system wanted the road to make a connection into Jackson, Tenn., and those close to the situation believe the Illinois Central's suit is a move to block the Burlington in its effort to come south of the Ohio river.

Ollie M. James has wired the Fulton County Levee Board that he will be here Sunday when the Mississippi River Commission stops here.

WORKS at BATTLE FRONT. Rev. H. J. Geiger Plays a Heroic Part in Hickman Flood.

All of the heroic men and women who wrought and suffered and still suffer in the regions devastated by the great Mississippi flood never will become known to the world at large, even by name. It is the rule in such cases that only here and there one is named above his fellows, but when this shall have taken place in the present instance it is not likely that any one name will be more brightly emblazoned than that of the Rev. H. J. Geiger, Episcopal clergyman of Hickman, Ky.

Louisville newspaper men who were sent to Hickman to report conditions there at their worst are earnest and enthusiastic in their commendation of the inspirational devotion with which the Rev. Mr. Geiger bore a yeoman's part in the days of agonizing fear and peril. Doffing clerical habiliments for flannel and corduroy he labored with shovel and sandbag on the levees shoulder to shoulder with negroes or men of birth and breeding and money. When, despite all their efforts, the great government levee broke and the Father of Waters surged angrily through the breach, the Rev. Mr. Geiger was among the first to turn rescuer of the weaker and unfortunate.

Blessed with splendid physical manhood he waded and swam and skiffed for hours wherever women and children were to be succored and adding to his noble example cheery words of unflagging courage and hope. It is now reported that, as soon as the conditions approach more nearly to the normal, an effort is to be made to obtain a Carnegie medal for "a man named Charlton," who assisted in saving a woman with a baby but a few hours old when the levee broke.

According to the story, Charlton was taking the last of his personal possessions from his inundated home and was making his way to the hills for safety. Hearing of the woman's extreme distress and peril he abandoned his belongings and hurried to the rescue. The report goes on to say that the assistance of "the Rev. Mr. Geiger," who had summoned him, he succeeded in getting the woman and child to safety. The house from which she was taken was directly in front of the break in the levee, and the bed on which she lay had to be held above the two men's heads, as they were in water up to their shoulders. At the imminent risk of their lives they succeeded in reaching land shelter with their human burden.

No one could desire to derogate anything from the honor and credit belonging "to the man named Charlton." He is deserving only of the best. But the report serves to show the force of the statement with which this relation began. Except for the incidental reference in the dispatches about "the man named Charlton" no mention has been made of the Rev. Mr. Geiger whose service has been continuous and not confined to a single instance.

It is not to be hinted that a medal would mean anything to the Rev. Mr. Geiger more than a mark of appreciation from his fellow men. His service has been rendered without thought of reward, simply and as a brave man does the duty at hand. No office or insignia could make him

IN MEMORIAM.

In the death of Mrs. Osie Wiley Oliver at St. Louis on the evening of the 24th of March, one of the most beloved of women has been removed from Oakton, Ky. In the four years she resided here, she became the beloved of old and young. She possessed a magnetic personality that drew to her a friendship that was indelible. While her later years were periods of suffering, she endeavored almost invariably to suppress her agony and manifest a cordiality and vivacity that cheered and comforted every one about her.

Upon leaving her stricken husband and three bright children the Friday preceding her tragic death on the operating table in St. Louis, there was no presentiment of a fatal ending of her trip. Her unrivalled good will and happy disposition were still evident. All in all she was an inspiration for good—within and without the Baptist Church, to which she was so devoted. She was a tower of strength for all. Her charity to the poor, her ministrations to the sick and thorough co-operation with all efforts to make mankind more brotherly, becomes her epitaph. A great void remains wherever she dwelt.

—A Friend.

A good portion of the brick warehouse north of the railroad and used by W. A. Dodds, tumbled down on account of the high water. Mr. Dodds had a large amount of lumber stored in this building, a considerable part of which he will lose. T. R. Reynolds will also lose considerable lumber, which was stored in an old building further east.

G. W. Newton asks us to state that he has at his home a little boy, 11 years old, who needs a home. The little fellow has been properly brought up, but is an orphan, a son of the late Buck Curlin, and Mr. Newton would like to see some respectable family take the child and raise him up as one of the family. For further information address Mr. Newton, Hickman, Ky.

EXTRA SESSION RUMORED. More Revenue Needed To Meet State's Expenses.

Frankfort.—A rumor has been current here for several days, said to be based on reliable information, that an extra session of the legislature will be called by Governor McCreary shortly after the adjournment of the board of equalization. It was said that the financial affairs of the state demand that something be done to increase the revenue and that the extra session will be called to consider the public utilities bill, which, it is claimed, would greatly increase the revenue of the state.

When asked about the report, Governor McCreary said:

"I have not considered it. I have been very busy since the adjournment of the legislature and have not considered calling an extra session."

It is said that members of the legislature who were opposed to, or voted against the passage of the public utilities bill at the regular session of the legislature are being sounded as to their views on that question now. It is said, too, that an effort is being made by those interested in the passage of the public utilities bill to induce enough of the members who voted against the bill, at the regular session, to change their minds and vote for the bill at a special session to be held this summer. It is reported reliably that several members have expressed a willingness to change their votes and cast them for the utilities bill. The rumor current here was that as soon as enough members had changed, so as to insure the passage of the bill, an extra session would be called, or at least the governor would be asked to issue the call.

The board of valuation and assessment, which assesses the franchises of the utility corporations, will take up the matter of assessment of corporations. It is generally believed that assessments on many corporations will be advanced.

State Committee Meet.

The Democratic State committee met recently at the Seelbach hotel, in Louisville, to arrange for a state convention to select delegates to the national convention. R. G. Phillips, secretary of the committee, was notified by Henry Prewitt, chairman of the committee, to notify the members. Only one point of difference developed at the meeting of the committee. The members were pretty well agreed as to the time for holding the state convention, but there was a lively tilt over the selection of a place for holding the convention. Lexington was favored by some of the committeemen, while others wanted the convention held in Louisville.

The state convention will be held the middle of June, the district conventions coming a day or two before to select committeemen. The convention will be of great interest for two reasons. In addition to the selection of delegates to the national convention, the two state committees will be reorganized and new members elected. The rules of the party will be revised, as is the custom every four years. It is expected that the state central committee will be abolished, and the Democrats have only the one committee, as all nominations are to be made by primaries.

Would Force Signing Patent.

Suit has been filed here in the Franklin circuit court by F. M. Sackett of Louisville to compel the governor and secretary of state to sign a land patent which was issued in 1876 when Governor McCreary was in the executive chair before. The land has changed hands several times since the original patent, and finally came into the possession of Mr. Sackett. The tract contains 200 acres and is located in Leslie county. The governor probably failed to sign the patent by accident, as the patent has the seal of the state on it and all the other necessary signatures.

Interest Continues Strong.

The meetings of the Christian church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Roger Noe, are growing in interest every night, and large crowds are attending the services. The solos by Mrs. Delcamp are greatly enjoyed and the choir singing, under the leadership of Professor Stratton, is one of the attractive features of the meetings.

Magistrates Visit Roads.

The Franklin county fiscal court at a recent session made arrangements to have the repairs to the turnpikes made at once and to that end Judge R. C. Heatt and Magistrates Johnson and Wiley were appointed as a committee to visit all the pikes in the county that are in need of repairs and find out just what is needed. This committee has started out and soon the workmen will be instructed to begin fixing the bad places in several of the roads. Great interest is being taken here in this project.

Cricket Hicks has at last attracted some attention in this community through his ingenuity in the invention of a patent fly trap, which is expected to be put into operation with the opening of the fly season. The trap is too complicated to describe, and is so arranged that if a fly ever finds its way inside it gets confused, and could never in the world get out. The trap has a main entrance and also a side entrance.

3,853 REFUGEES HERE.

Hickman Camp Grows.
Situation Well in Hand.

As the water goes down, local conditions, as a result of the high water, begin to look brighter. This statement may sound somewhat paradoxical in view of the fact that the number of refugees in Hickman has increased from 2028 to 3853 in the past ten days, but the fact is some of these are beginning to disperse and are receiving employment. As fast as the water goes down, these people can again return to their homes, and Capt. Elliott, in charge of government relief work, thinks there will be a gradual decrease in the tented city's population from now on.

A free employment agency was opened today at the Mayor's office, and this will be the means of giving many of the idle something to do.

The crest of the flood has passed this section and gone on southward, where many levee breaks and similar disasters, as experienced here, have been reported.

The government report on the number of people being cared for in this territory up to yesterday is as follows:

Hickman, 3,853 people and 1500 head of stock.
Portageville refugees, 1452.
Charleston, 1900.
Columbus, 1200.
Dyersburg, 800.
Tiptonville, 3,500.
New Madrid, 3802.
Caruthersville, 700.
Wickliffe, 447.

This makes a total of over 16,000 people being looked after by the government and local charities. At Wyatt, Ark., smallpox has broken out and they have over 60 cases to look after. In the four camps at Hickman only four cases of sickness is reported. These are of minor importance, except a case of erysipelas which has been rigidly quarantined.

Lieut. Morris of the American Red Cross, says we are to be congratulated on the good health and sanitary conditions among our refugees. If this very satisfactory state of affairs is to continue, let the refugees be impressed with this little precautionary rule of health—"Swat the fly and both the drinking water." Upon their return to the bottoms, they will find the water in bad shape—full of typhoid—caused by many dead animals being in the river. If the germ-carrying fly and the contaminated water are properly looked after, it will save many lives.

As a whole the situation is well in hand. Rev. Gelger, chairman of the local relief committee, the Red Cross and the Federal government, county city and state officers did excellent work and too much cannot be said in praise of their efforts. The fact is, Hickman camp is one of the best regulated of the whole flooded district. Just how long it will be before these people can return to their home depends solely upon the going down of the river, but it is likely that May the 10th will find the ranks well thinned out, if not completely so.

Business is beginning to pick up and plans for re-construction are being mapped out. Merchants, professional men and planters are working together for the common cause of re-building and re-establishing those lines of business which have suffered from the overflow.

HOGWALLOW NEWS.

Washington Hocks is recuperating from an over-dose of rough-outrats, which he took by mistake for snave a few nights ago, and is able to sit up at the eating table with his clothing on.

The editor of the Tickville Tidings has declared for Bryan in the presidential race and intends to see to it that he is elected. All that now remains is the selection of some good man for vice-president.

A lady friend from the Calf Ribs neighborhood is preparing to arrive in Hogwallow to be the guest of Miss Flute Belcher. The visitor will wear her best clothes and expects to attract a good deal of favorable attention.

The Mail Carrier is expected now any day. He left Tickville as usual four days ago bound for this place, and if he does not reach here within the next few days the public will come to the conclusion that he has been delayed by some unforeseen circumstance over which he had no control.

It is reported that Prof. Sap Spladen is about to begin literary labors in the writing of a diary of himself, commemorating in particular the many things he has not done during the past year. The postmaster will supply the writing paper for this job and has sent off for the best price on paper in large lots.

has finished the work of making it up into brooms, and started with a wagon load of them for Thunderation Thursday morning. When in the proximity of Gimlet creek bridge the mules ran away and swept down the road for several miles before they could be stopped.

Slim Flinders lit his lantern after every other honest man had gone to bed Tuesday night, and raided a smokehouse on Musket Ridge. On the way to the scene he stopped carefully along the way and covered up all of his tracks as fast as he made them, thus making it impossible for him to be tracked, and after having reached the smokehouse he turned his lantern down right soft and low and entered by digging a hole under the door. After placing two hawk jowls and a ham in his sack he was making all necessary preparations for departure but in some way the owner of the meat was awakened, and came in pursuit. Slim soon outran the pursuer, and climbed a tall tree on the top limb of which he expected to remain until the excitement blew over, but in some way the owner of the meat came straight to the tree and ordered him down. After reaching the earth again Slim broke down and confessed his guilt, and a compromise was effected by Slim letting him have one of the jowls back. Slim still wonders how that fellow knew he was up the tree, and cannot imagine unless it was on account of the lantern he forgot to blow out. —Kentuckian.

CLARA BARTON DEAD.

It is a remarkable coincidence that upon the very day the American Red Cross men were dispatched to the various flooded towns along the Mississippi river, that the founder of the grand organization was called to the Great Beyond.

Miss Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross and probably the most widely known American woman of her day, died at her home, Red Cross, in Glen Echo, Md., Friday morning at 9 o'clock. She was past 60 years old.

Miss Barton suffered an attack of pneumonia in February, 1911, had a fever and the disease became chronic. She went last summer, as usual, to her home in Oxford, Mass., and returned to Glen Echo in better health last autumn. Muscular weakness of the heart developed, and for weeks the condition of the venerable nurse had been such as to cause grave concern among her friends.

Her bright mind was undimmed, almost to the last, and her ready wit and quick repartee made her sick room a place of cheer to her attendants. With her when the end came was her nephew, Stephen Barton, of Boston.

Miss Barton's name will endure with history and men of all nations will follow her memory. No greater work has been founded by any woman.

JONES MAKES IMPROVEMENTS.

New Coke Oven Built and $2,500 Soda Fountain Going In.

"Progressive Percy" Jones, the wholesale baker and ice cream man, has just finished putting in a fine coke oven in the bakery department of his Cafe No. 1, and now boasts of one of the very finest bakeries to be found in the state. It may be excelled in size but not in quality. He expects to even improve on the already famous products of his bakery. The state pure food department a short time ago said that this is one of the cleanest and best arranged baking concerns in the state, but Jones is never satisfied unless he is making improvements of some kind, he just can't help it.

His handsome new fountain fixtures arrived Tuesday and are now being installed. Mr. Jones informs us that there is only one fountain in the state that beats his. The new fixture is of massive design, finished in dark oak and trimmed with beautiful stained glass. It contains the largest mirror ever brought to Hickman, and with electric fixtures, glass-shelved cabinets, marble bar, etc., is "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." The best part of the new fountain is that it is an iceless affair, and carries with it an automatic electric carbonator. Its cost is approximately $2,500, and is the prettiest thing of the kind in Western Kentucky.

Percy will use his old fountain in West Hickman, where he will probably open a soft drink stand in a short time. At present he is running three places of business, with a half dozen "trains in the fire" on the outside. Jones is a live wire and Hickman could stand a few more like him.

Lee Line boats have resumed operation after being out of commission for three weeks. The Sadie Lee is due up from Memphis this afternoon. The first St. Louis boat will leave on the 23rd, and the Peters Lee left Cincinnati yesterday. Agent McGuire is up against it now, as their old warehouse floated away during the high water. He is going to try to get the company to put in a good floating dock here—the very thing that is needed. Officials of the company will be here in a short time to look after making some kind of warehouse arrangements.

The Bible
The Word of God

By Rev. Barry B. Hall, Pastor of Temple Baptist Church, Minneapolis, Minnesota. 1-1 1-1

All that comes from God must be perfect, complete. No so. Both the world and man came from God, and neither is perfect or complete. So the Bible came from God, although parts of it are crude and imperfect. The Bible, like all other things, is the result of development and growth. The patriarchs were in God's school and their ethical code was not completed until Christ came and fulfilled (completed) it. Certainly an ethical code allowing polygamy and 'an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth,' is crude and imperfect. But since Jesus completed that code, no man has been able either to add to or take from it. It is the only code of ethics man has ever known that stands unchanged and unchangeable throughout the ages.

There are but two things in the visible world that do not die—an immortal soul and God's word. The Bible is a living thing. The spirit of secession is dead, but the spirit of union still lives. So all other ethical codes are either dead or dying, but the words of Jesus, which are increasingly exercising a greater influence over the destiny of both men and nations. Unlike all other books, it never becomes obsolete. All other books but the Bible which are a few hundred years old are obsolete and out of date. The Bible never grows old; it never dies. It is a living, growing thing. It grows on one; the rereading of familiar passages gives new light, and impresses one with the greatness of the book. The more one studies it with a reverent spirit the more its greatness looms up before him, and as his capacity to see more truth grows, the more truth he finds in the word. Every combination of social conditions only draws out of the Word new truth and more light.

All other books flourish best in the language in which they were written, but the Bible flows freely into all molds and lends itself with freedom to every language and dialect. It alone is adapted to all classes and conditions of people. It is a discoverer of the human heart, and reveals all men to themselves. It reveals to all races of men their motives, needs and sins. An educated Hindu, on hearing a passage read from the word, said, "That Book exactly describes us Indians."

The Bible is indestructible. It survives all attempts to destroy it. Yet it is hated as no other book because it condemns man and claims authority over him. Rome tried to burn it, and some of the greatest scholars of all the ages have tried to destroy it, but both alike miserably failed. Thomas Paine thought his "Age of Reason" would put the Bible out of print in fifty years, and thousands thought that Darwin's "Descent of Man" had destroyed it at one stroke, but they were deceived. Darwin really discovered nothing new, for both Moses and Christ were Theistic evolutionists. Evolution does not destroy the idea of a Creator; it only gives the Creator's method of creation.

The Bible stands unapproached as a life-giving book. It awakens dead nations and gives them new life. Christian nations, since the Bible was opened in the sixteenth century, have become responsible for all the world's advancement in science, literature, invention, commerce and discovery. When the open Bible came into Japan she awoke, received new life, arose and defeated Russia, a land without an open Bible. The open Bible has gone into China, and she is at this moment giving birth to a new republic. Laboring men, once but beasts of burden, under the influence of an open Bible, have ceased to be beasts of burden and have come to be men. The Bible is also a life-transforming book. It revolutionizes the lives of both nations and men. When Titus took Jerusalem, 1,100,000 of the Jewish people were put to the sword, many thousands were sold into slavery, and thousands were sold to make sport by being butchered or torn into pieces in the arena. When America took Cuba and the Philippines she banished yellow fever from the island and established a republic for the people, and in one ship she sent 600 teachers to the Philippines. Certainly a marvelous transformation. And it is also true of the individual; no man can habitually read the book with a reverent spirit without becoming a nobler, a truer and a better man.

Is the Bible the word of God? Have the civilizations of earth ever produced a book that could compare with it; has any other book ever exercised such an influence over the nations of earth; has any other book ever transformed the lives of men as the Bible has; is any other book a living book and indestructible as the Bible is? If this book is a book the like of which the civilizations of earth have not and cannot produce, then it was not produced by man alone, and therefore it must be the word of God, given in earthen vessels, to be sure, but the word of God.

POULTRY
NOTES

The selling makes profit or loss. Don't keep pullets that seem weak through the winter.

Pullets hatched right and fed right should begin to lay in October.

Women are better fitted by nature than men for poultry keeping.

Turkeys are at their best from November 15 to the first of January.

From the feed the hen must get lime for the shell, oils and mineral matter for the yolk and albumen for the white.

One of the most difficult problems for the poultryman to solve is how to easily provide pure, fresh water for his fowls.

Give the birds clean nests and roosting places, study their likings and needs, and the egg yield should be increased.

The essentials for winter eggs are hens that come from a strain of good layers, comfortable quarters, and an abundance of food.

Three-fourths of the diseases could be traced to impure air, dampness, improper food, close breeding and ill-chosen conditions.

Wheat screenings, having more protein, are superior to the plump grain for laying hens, and when they are good and clean are very much cheaper than good wheat.

Fighting Parson Feared.

Banning, Cal.—Many Indians of the different reservations of Riverside county are concerned over the announcement received from Denver that the Rev. Charles C. Brannon, the "fighting parson" of the Methodist faith, had been appointed chief special officer of the Indian service in place of Mr. Coggeshall, who takes an Indian agency in New Mexico. The Rev. Mr. Brannon has been shot at many times and never hit; he has had many fights and was never "kicked," and will have the task of suppressing illegal sales of liquor among the Indians, thereby taking the place made vacant some time since by "Pussy-foot" Johnson's resignation.

MAKING "EVEN MONEY."

Gen. H. A. Tyler was in St. Louis a short time ago for medical treatment by Dr. Lewis Behrens, and before returning, asked for the amount of his bill. The doctor gave him no satisfaction, which led the general to at least expect, as usual, that he might receive a somewhat full-grown bill by mail later. The bill came and instead of being $100 or $150 as Tyler expected, it was only $36. He mailed the physician a check, but it came back to him by return mail. A note attached informed the general that the check was to be turned over to our flood sufferers instead of giving the check to charity he tore it up, possibly because he and his son had previously given $100 each. But wait a minute—in lieu of the check torn up, the general proceeded to—just to make it even money—and then, as usual, local charities got another unsolicited and unexpected donation. Grand old man; may he live another century. Of all the rich men of Kentucky, he is the greatest philanthropist and the most energetic for his years. It is not only during scenes of distress that his purse-strings are loosed—but almost every day in the year he dispenses to charity with lavish hand. Annually, he gives away what would be a small fortune for most of us.

Put End to Bad Habit.

Things never look bright to one with "the blues." Ten to one the trouble is a sluggish liver filling the system with billious poison, that Dr. King's New Life Pills would expel. Try them and let the joy of better feeling end "the blues." Best for stomach, liver and kidneys, 25c—Heim & Ellison.

PRIMARY THE THING.

If the Democratic party authorities of Kentucky will call a primary to select delegates to the National Democratic convention the strongest candidate will win and the people will be satisfied, but if left to mass conventions manipulated by court house clerks then it is probable that there will be a row and rumpus that bodes no good to the future of the party. The Congressmen want a primary to nominate United States senators and State officers, therefore why not apply the same to selecting delegates to the National convention. This is the fairest way and begets the will of the rank and file of the party. The people want and demand a fair deal.—Howling Green Daily News.

NEAR BLAZE FRIDAY.

The old dump on the north side of the street opposite S. M. Naffeh's residence, known as the "Bucket of Blood," and recently occupied by the Hickman Job Shop, caught fire Friday morning about 9:30 and barely escaped destruction. Had it been a half-way respectable building it would have burned in spite of thunder.

The fire started from a gasoline stove, which was being used to make candy for a little candy shop on the second floor. The lower part of the old trap is occupied by three or four families, who hastened to get their household goods out. Had the building burned, there was a possibility of it also lighting some small residences, then a small grocery and meat shop, White Bros. pressing establishment, Stahl's livery barn and on down to the business part of town. But for that risk, it would have been a blessing had the old shack burned.

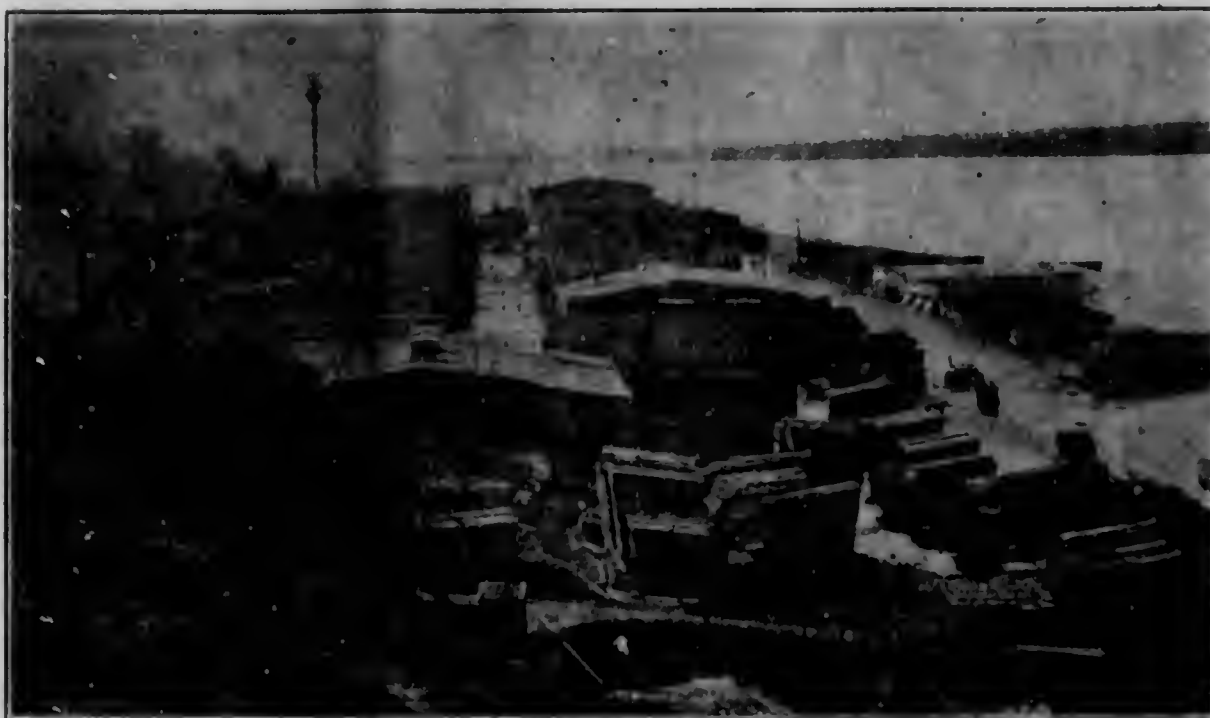

When the water goes down in the bottoms it will find many fences gone, and planters had just as well get ready to enforce a stock law for the remainder of the year if they expect to make a crop. It will be too late to rebuild fences and get in a crop too.

LAKE SUIT DECIDED.

One hundred years after it was formed by the severest earthquakes ever felt in the Mississippi Valley, the ownership of Reelfoot Lake, a large and historic body of water, lying in the counties of Lake and O'Brien, in the extreme northwest corner of Tennessee, was decided last week when the Court of Civil Appeals denied the claims to the property set up by the State of Tennessee, and held that the West Tennessee Land Company was legally and rightfully in possession of the lake. It will be found, however, that owning and controlling are two different things, and the bunch of lawyers and politicians who grabbed this property will doubtless find themselves with a "white elephant on their hands." A thing we would like to know is the difference in the assessment figure and the price at which it was offered to the State. Don't all speak at once.

The new county unit law becomes effective on June 12. It simply makes every county in the State the unit in prohibition elections, and no city, regardless of its size, can hold a separate election. It will make Kentucky counties "dry" by an almost unanimous vote.

NEW GIN INVENTED.

John A. Fordyce, of Little Rock, Ark., son of Col. S. W. Fordyce, obtained a patent from the United States on a cotton gin which he invented. It is claimed to be the first successful departure from the gin invented by Eli Whitney in 1793.

This new gin pulls the fiber from the seed in such a manner that the natural length and strength of each fiber is preserved. This gives it a length of one-sixteenth to one-eighth of an inch over the old way. The speed of ginning exceeds the speed of the saw gin from 20 to 50 per cent while the power required is less. It strips the fiber from the seed in a more thorough manner and increases the amount of lint obtained from the seed by about 4 per cent over the saw gin.

At the cotton mill the cotton from the new gin has 18 per cent less waste and the spinning value is so much increased that the yarn made from it is 5 per cent stronger than cotton from the old style gin.

Tests made by the department of Agriculture at Washington support these claims.

HEART REPAIRED WITH WIRE

How Six Feet of Golden Thread
Coiled in a Man's Aorta Made It Strong Again.

Philadelphia.—With the walls of his heart reinforced by a coil of wire
through which electricity passes, just as it follows an electric-light wire, John Braden rests at the University hospital, and expects to resume his usual routine in life in a few weeks.

The heart is the pump which keeps
all the machinery of the human body in motion. It has valves just as all other pumps have, and when an engineer finds a valve leaking in a pump under his care he stops the engine and introduces a new valve if the defective one is beyond repair. The main valve in the heart of John Braden leaked. All through the day he was disturbed by its unnatural noise,
and at night it kept him awake.

Finally the pressure became so very severe and the peril to his life so immediately grave that he was removed to the University hospital, where Dr.

Coil of Gold Wire Inserted in Heart's Aorta.

Charles H. Frazier essayed the delicate task of tightening up the valve
of his heart and reinforcing the entire structure.

Examination disclosed the fact that the aorta was about to rupture. This would inevitably have resulted in death.

Dr. Frazier opened the aorta as near to the heart as possible and defly inserted a hollow needle which had been electrically insulated.
Through this needle Dr. Frazier pushed and arranged in evenly distributed coils more than six feet of solid gold wire. This thread of wire was guided by the surgeon through the pulsing
blood vessel by the sense of touch alone, and it was built up in the aorta, at the point of its weakest dilatation, just as a weakened building wall would be strengthened at its most perilous point. Thus the heart was bound round, on the inside, with a coil of strong but fine wire, caught and held in place by the surgeon's trained fingers. Then the problem of preventing hemorrhage arose.

Coagulation of the blood was the great, the vital end sought. It was decided to employ electricity to obtain this purpose. Coagulation takes place at both ends of the galvanic current—that at the positive pole being small,
black and hard, and that the negative being larger, softer and of yellowish color. It happens that the blood is the very best agency in the body for the conducting of electricity,
and when, as in this case, both poles
are inside the sac and near to each other, a mild current of electricity will cause vigorous electrolysis. In applying the current to Braden a rheostat was used to control the flow and to prevent shock when it should be cut off.

Thus by coagulation the reinforcement of the heart was accomplished
over the gold wire framework and nature is building a new wall within the valve, stopping all leakage and giving John Braden a new lease of life.

BISHOP WOODCOCK COMING.

Bishop Woodcock, one of the most able divines in the state, will preach at St. Paul's Episcopal church, in Hickman, next Sunday morning and evening. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend these services.

Mrs. Jerry Wemp, of near East Prairie, Mo., was the guest of her brother, Alex. Barnes, and family, Sunday.

Capt. Logan, who has been here for some time dispensing government aid to flood sufferers, left Monday for Memphis, Capt. Elliott succeeding him in charge here.

Mrs. W. O. McMillan and little daughter, Miss Hylda, will leave the last of the week for Fredericksburg, Va., to visit relatives. They will be gone several months.

L. A. Stone seems to be mixed up some way with the disappearance of several pies from the home of Mrs.
J. F. Easley. Of course, he knows nothing about the absconded pastry,
but at least, he should attempt to square himself with his hostess.

A force of men was started Friday clearing the way for the laying out and grading of streets in the Sallie Thomas section of the Industrial League grounds. Mr. Brown contemplates "starting something" in Greater Hickman this spring. The recent flood has added one more to the catalogue of logical reasons why the new addition is Hickman's future residence section; namely, it is positively above any high-water mark. Water would have to get 100 feet deep on the rest of the town before it would reach this section.

Mosquitoes are already flocking into this section in droves, and unless some preventative measures are taken immediately, the pests will make life miserable, besides the greater probability of their spreading disease.
The back water will leave many small puddles of water which will afford a regular mosquito hatchery unless they are drained or given a coating of coal oil. All unnecessary vessels of water around the house should be promptly emptied. Good screens, put up at once, will prove a profitable investment this season, as, at best, we are scheduled to have a greater crop
of mosquitoes this year than usual.
City and county health officers should see that proper sanitary rules are observed AT ONCE.

CHAPTER VII.

The Blacksmith.

I had come up gasping for breath, well out in the stream, either shore a mere darker shadow showing above the water. How far I had been swept below the barge could not be guessed, as I could distinguish no outlines clearly, excepting the bare spars of a vessel, tied up to the west shore. As this ship had not been in sight previously I concluded the drift had been greater than anticipated, and I struck out quickly toward the opposite bank, fearful lest I be borne down as far as Gloucester before I could finally make land. It was a hard swim across the swift current, and I was nearly exhausted when I finally crept up the low bank, and lay dripping and panting in the shelter of some low bushes. Except for the bark of a distant dog there was no sound more disturbing than the rustle of leaves, and the lapping of water. As my breath came back I sat up, wrung out my clothes as best I could, and, with difficulty, drew on the boots I had borne across, slung to my shoulder.

I possessed but a dim conception of where I was, yet knew I must make a wide detour to the east so as to escape British foraging parties.

I must have plodded doggedly along through the darkness for fully five miles, without perceiving the first sign of habitation, or even a wood into which I could crawl for concealment, when I suddenly came upon a long, one-story stone building standing at the left of the road, a grim, silent, apparently deserted structure, one end of the roof caved in, and several of the windows smashed. I tried the doors, but they appeared firmly fastened. Far in the east there was a faint lightening of the sky promising the approach of dawn, and thus aroused to a knowledge that I must immediately attain shelter, I clambered through one of the broken windows, and dropped to the earthen floor within. I could see nothing, not even a hand held before my eyes, yet carefully felt my way forward through a tangle of rubbish, wheels, scraps of iron, some casks, a number of plough handles, and a ruff of stuff I could not make out. The place had evidently been used as a repair shop, but must have been closed for months, as I could feel the grit of dust every where, and cobwebs brushed against my face as I moved about. Finally I felt the outlines of a large box half filled with paper, and, for want of something better, crept in and snuggled down, intending to rest there until daylight should reveal my surroundings.

I was warm enough now, my clothing practically dry, but thoroughly tired from the long tramp over the tooned cobwebs into golden tapestry. One side of the box in which I lay had been broken out, and I could see the full length of the shop, which appeared littered from end to end with all manner of implements of husbandry, and woodworking and blacksmith's tools. All this I perceived with my first glance, but it was the distant sound of a voice which as instantly held my attention. At first I could not locate the speaker, nor comprehend the peculiar singsong of the utterance. But as I lifted my head, listening intently, I knew the man to be beyond the wooden partition at my right, and that he was praying fervently. Somehow heartened by this discovery I crept out from the bed of papers, and stole silently forward to the narrow door which apparently led into this second apartment. The voice never ceased in its monotonous appeal, and I ventured to lift the latch, and take cautious glance through the slight opening.

It was a blacksmith shop of fair size, fully equipped with all the tools of the trade. The man was facing me, but with eyes closed, and uplifted, as his lips poured forth the fervent words of prayer. I was not a religious man in those days, yet the faith of my mother was not forgotten, and there was something of sincerity about that solitary kneeling figure I could not but respect. The words uttered, the deep resonant voice, and above all, the expression of that upturned face, bled me silent, motionless. He was a man of short, sturdy limb, but great bulk, massive chest, and immense shoulders evidencing remarkable strength. What was this man, this praying blacksmith? A patriot surely, from his words of petition; one who had suffered much, but was willing to suffer more. The strength chiselled in that upturned face, those deeply marked features, revealed no common mental equipment. Here was a real man, with convictions, one who would die for an ideal; without doubt a radical, ready to go to any extreme where conscience bled the way.

As he finally paused, his head bowed low, I stepped forward into the light, confident of welcome, utterly forgetful of the uniform I wore. At the first faint sound of my approach on the floor he was upon his feet fronting me, the shortness of his limbs yielding him a certain grotesque appearance, his deep-set eyes regarding me suspiciously. Before I could realize the man's intent he sprang between me and the outer door, his hand gripping an iron bar.

"A son of Basil!" came the roar from his lips. "How came you here in that uniform? Are you alone?"

"Alone, yes," and I hurried the scarlet jacket into the dirt with a gesture of disgust. "I had even forgotten I wore it. Wait a moment. I heard your prayer, and know you must be with us. I am Major Lawrence of the Maryland Line."

He stared at me motionless.

"Then how come ye here?"

"I was sent into Philadelphia by Washington himself, but my identity was discovered, and there was no way to escape except across the Delaware. I reached here during the night, and crept into your shop to hide. The sound of your voice awoke me from sleep, and I knew from your words that it was safe for me to come forth."

"You may know it, young man, but I don't," he replied gruffly. "We're a bit suspicious of strangers here in the Jerseys these days. The minions of Satan encompass us about. What have ye to show to prove your story?"

I shook my head, extending my hands.

"Only my word of honor. I had a pass from Hamilton, but destroyed

"How Came Ye Here?"

dark road, and exhausted by the excitement through which I had passed. Even my mind seemed dulled, and I appeared useless to think or plan. I had not intended to sleep, yet drowsiness came, and I lost consciousness.

I know not what aroused me, but it was already daylight, a gleam of sun through the windows turning the face

BRONCHITIS

To Whom It May Concern Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910—"I was sick for two years with chronic bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors or from a trip which I took for my health, and I had to give up work. Vinol was recommended, and from the second bottle I commenced to improve. I gained in weight and strength, my bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol which makes it so successful in curing bronchitis.

Vinol is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles—not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try Vinol. If you don't think it helps you, we will return your money. Helm & Ellison, Hickman, Ky.

that before entering the British lines. If I tell the whole story, perhaps you will understand its truth."

The expression of his face did not change, yet I thought the deep-set eyes were not altogether unkind.

"You are hungry, no doubt?"

"Hungry human, yes."

"Then we'll eat and talk at the same time. You're only one man, and I'm not afraid of you, and if ye are a Britisher I wouldn't starve you to death. There's little enough, the good Lord knows, but you're welcome to the half of it. Make yourself comfortable there on the bench."

He threw open a cupboard in one corner, and brought forth a variety of food, placing this upon a wide shelf near at hand. Occasionally our eyes met, and I knew he was slowly making up his mind regarding me. This silent scrutiny could not have been altogether unsatisfactory, for, when he finally drew up an empty box and sat down, he was prepared to talk.

"Help yourself," he began gravely. "It is rough camp fare, but doubtless you are used to that. Do you know me?"

I scanned his face again intently, surprised by the question, yet recognized no familiar features.

"No," I replied, with some hesitation. "Have we ever met before?"

"Not to my remembrance," and the man's language and accent evidenced education above his apparent station. "But I have won some repute in this part of the Jerseys, and thought my name might be known to you. You would recognize the signature of George Washington?"

"I have seen it often."

He drew a flat leather case from a pocket inside his shirt, extracting therefrom a folded paper, which he opened, and extended to me across the table. With a glance I mastered the few lines written thereon, recognizing its genuineness.

"Hamilton penned that," I said in quick surprise, "and it is signed by Washington's own hand."

The deep-set eyes twinkled.

"Right," he said shortly, "that bit of paper may save me from hanging some day. There are those who would like well to see me swing if they only laid hands on me at the right time and place. You know what the paper is?"

"A commission as Captain," and I bent over it again, "issued to Daniel Farrell, giving him independent command of scouts—by heavens! are you 'Bull' Farrell?"

He was eating quietly, but found time to answer.

"There are those who call me by that nickname; others give me even a worse handle. 'T is my nature to make enemies faster than friends. You know me then?"

"I was with Maxwell at Germantown," the remembrance of the scene coming vividly to mind, "when you came up with your ragged fellows. You have certainly taught them how to fight."

"There was no teaching necessary; all the trouble I ever have is in holding them back," his face darkening. "Every man who rides with me knows what war means here in the Jerseys; they have seen their homes in flames, their women and children driven out by Hessian hirelings. We fight for life as well as liberty, and when we strike we strike hard. But enough of that. We have sufficient confidence in each other by now to talk freely. What did you discover in Philadelphia? No more than I could tell you myself, I'll warrant."

I told the story, while he listened silently, his eyes alone expressing interest. As I ended, he slowly lit his pipe, and sat there smoking, apparently thinking over what I had said.

"Have I learned anything of importance?" I asked finally.

"For Washington, yes; but very little unknown to me. So you met Mistress Claire, eh? The little minx! 'T is a month since I heard of her."

CHAPTER VIII.

Tangling Threads.

My surprise at this unexpected reference to the Lady of the Blended Rose, almost prevented utterance. What could this partisan ranger know of the girl? How could he even have identified her from my vague reference?

"Why do you say that?" I asked eagerly. "I did not mention the lady's name."

Almost a Miracle.

One of the most startling changes
ever seen in any man, according to W. R. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he wrote
"that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's new Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles.
Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy
for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 60 cents and $1.00.

"MY LADY OF DOUBT."—Continued.

so," and the grim mouth smiled. "No one else in Philadelphia would have turned the trick so neatly; besides the fact that your opponent was Grant would have revealed the identity of the girl."

"You know them both then?"
"Fairly well; he was a boy in these parts, an' I have shod his riding horse many a time. A headstrong, domineering, spoiled lad he was, and quarrelsome."

"But Mistress Mortimer," I interrupted, "is her family also from this neighborhood?"

"To the northeast of here, near Locust Grove; the properties of the two families adjoin each other, an' I have heard there is distant kinship between them, although if that be true all that was good in the strain must have descended to the one branch, an' all the evil to the other. Day and night could be no different. Colonel Mortimer is a genial, pleasant gentleman, an' a loyal friend, although we are in arms against each other. To tell the truth I half believe his heart is with the Colonies, although he cast his fortunes with the King. He even has a son in the Continental Army."

"On Lee's staff," I interrupted. "The daughter told me he was a twin brother."

"Yes, an' as great a rogue as the girl, with the same laughing blue eyes."

"And Mistress Claire," I questioned,
"on which side is she?"

"Can you ask that after having met her as a Lady of the Blended Rose?
Pshaw, man, I could almost give you a list of the loyalist dames who make sport for the British garrison, an'
Mistress Claire is not least in rank or beauty among them. What else could you expect of a young girl when her father wears the green an' white,
while her lover has made a reputation
breathtaking with his hiring raiders?"

"You mean Grant?"

"Certainly; they have been engaged from childhood, though God pity the poor girl if they ever marry. His work in the Jerseys has been almost as merciless as that of 'Red' Fagin, an'
it is even whispered about they ride together at times. I doubt if she knows the whole truth about him,
though she can scarcely deem him an angel even at that. Surely you never supposed her on our side?"

"She helped me," I insisted, "knowing who I was, and even said she wished my cause well."

"The inconsistency of a woman;
perhaps the two had had some misunderstanding, an' she was glad enough
to outwit the fellow."

"No, 't was not that, I am sure; I could read truth in her eyes."

"In Claire's eyes?" he laughed outright. "Oh, I know the innocent blue
of them, and warn you not to trust such blindly. Other men have thought the same, an' found out they read wrongly when the end came—aye!
many of them. When she was a girl
she played marry tricks, an' yet I love
her as though she were my own daughter.
An' she's a good girl in spite of all the mischief in her."

"And she is truly a loyalist?"

"If not, I know no better. The rebel blood is all in the boy so far as I can learn, yet I will not answer for what Mistress Claire might do."

We fell silent, my memory with the girl, endeavoring to recall her exact words, the expression of her face. It was not in my heart to believe she had deceived me.

I had almost forgotten where I was,
as well as the presence of my companion, when he suddenly arose to his feet, and, pushing aside the wooden window shutter, looked out. A glance of his keen eyes was sufficient.

"Get back into your box, Major," he exclaimed quickly. "Pull the papers
over you."

I was upon my feet, conscious of the distant sound of horses' hoofs.

"What is it? The enemy?"

"Rangers; fifty of them, I judge, an'
they'll never pass here without rummaging around. Quick now, under cover."

"But what about yourself?"

"Don't worry about me; those fellows haven't any evidence against me
—yet. They're after you."

I was through the intervening door with a bound and an instant later had hurrowed under the crumpled papers.
The shifting of the sun had left this corner of the repair shop in shadow,
but I was scarcely outstretched in my hastily improvised hiding place, when I heard the blacksmith calmly open his outer door, where he stood smoking, clad in leathern apron, awaiting the approaching horsemen. They swept about the corner of the smithy almost at the same moment, pulling up their tired horses at sight of him.
From amid the thud of hoofs, and the rattle of accoutrements, a voice spoke sharply:

"So you're here, Farrell, you old rebel hypocrite. Well, what are you hiding now?"

"I was not aware that I had anything to hide, Captain Grant," was the dignified response. "This is my shop,
an' where I should be."

"Oh, hell! We all know you well enough, you old fox, and we'll catch
you red-handed yet, and hang you.
But we're not hunting after your kind today. Did you see anything of a fellow in scarlet jacket along here last night, or this morning?"

I failed to catch Farrell's answer,
but the voice of the officer was sufficiently loud to reach me.

"A rebel spy; the sneaking rascal must have swam the Delaware. We'll look about your shop just the same
before we ride on, Mason, take a half-dozen men with you, and rake the place over."

I heard the sound of their boots on the floor, and hurrowed lower in my
box. Two or three entered the old shop, and began to probe about among the debris. One kicked the box in which I lay, and thrust a bayonet down through the loose papers, barely missing my shoulder. With teeth clenched I remained breathless, but the fellow seemed satisfied, and moved on, after searching the dark corner beyond. At last I heard them all go out, mumbling to each other, and ventured to sit up again, and draw a fresh breath. They had left the door ajar,
and I had a glimpse through the crack.
Farrell was leaning carelessly in the outer doorway, smoking, his short lega wide apart, his expression one of total indifference. A big fellow stepped past him, and saluted some one just out of sight.

"Nobody in there, sir," he reported.

"All right, Mason," and Grant came into view on a rangy sorrel. "Get your men back into saddle; we'll move on."

"Think he went this way?" asked
the blacksmith carefully.

"How the hell do I know!" savagely.
"He must have started this way,
but likely he took the north road.
We'll get the chap before night, unless he runs into Delavan's fellows out yonder. See here, Farrell," holding in his horse, "we'll be back here about dark, and will want something to eat."
"You will be welcome to all you find."

"You impudent rebel, you see that you are here when we come. I know you, you night rider, and will bring you to book yet. Forward men—trot!
Close up the rank there, sergeant;
we'll take the road to the left."

I watched them go past, the dust-covered green uniforms slipping by the crack of the door, as the men urged their horses faster. Farrell never moved, the blue tobacco smoke
curling above his head, and I stole across the littered storeroom to a cob-webbed window, from which I could watch the little column of riders go down the hill. They finally disappeared in the edge of a grove, and I turned around to find the blacksmith leaning against his anvil waiting for me.

"Genial young fellow, Grant," he said. "Always promising to hang me, but never quite ready to tackle the job. Afraid I shall have to disappoint him again tonight."

"You will not wait for him?"

"Hardly. You heard what he said about Delavan? That was the very news I wanted to learn. Now I think both those lads will meet me much sooner than they expect."

He stepped forward into the open doorway, and blew three shrill blasts on a silver whistle. The echo had scarcely died away, when, out from a thick clump of trees perhaps half a mile distant, a horse shot forth, railing toward us. As the reckless rider drew up suddenly, I saw him to be a harefooted, freckle-faced boy of perhaps sixteen, his eyes bright with excitement.

"So it's you on duty, Bea," said Farrell quietly, glancing from the boy to his horse. "Well, you're in for a ride.
Have the man at Lone Tree by sundown; all of them. See Duval first,
an' tell him for me this is a big thing.
Now off with you!"

The boy, grinning happily, swung
his horse around, and, jabbing his sides
with bare heels, rode madly away directly south across the vacant land.
Within five minutes he had vanished down a sharp incline. Farrell was still staring after him, when I asked:
"What is it?"

It Helps!

Mrs. J. F. Daniels, of Sip, Ky., writes: "I was so sick for 3 or 4 years.
I had to hire my work
done, most of the time.
I had given up hope. When I began to take Cardui, I knew, right away, it was helping me. Now, I am better than ever before in my life, and Cardui did it."

"A little bit of private war," he said grimly. "If you'll go with me tonight, Major, I'll show you some guerilla fighting. You heard what Grant said about Delavan. We've been waiting five days for him to head back toward Philadelphia. He has twenty wagons, an' a foraging party of less than fifty men somewhere
out Medford way," with sweep of hand to the northeast. "If he an' Grant get together the two commanda will outnumber us, but we'll have the advantage of surprise, of a swift attack in the dark. In my judgment that is what Grant was sent out for—to guard Delavan's wagons. His spy hunting was a personal affair. My advice to you, Lawrence, is to lie quiet here today, and go along with us tonight. It will be in the same direction you'll have to travel, an' you might have trouble by daylight. No objections to a fight, have you?"

"None whatever."
"I judged so from your face. Better get what rest you can; we will have twenty miles to ride before dark. I'll go over into the timber there an' feed
the horses."

I watched him cross the open land,
impressed by the man's immense shoulders and short limbs. I could

of Action, but a Man of Thought,

scarcely analyze the influence he already exerted over me, but I felt him to be a natural leader of men, an intellectual as well as physical giant. I picked up a book lying open on the bench—it was an English translation of a famous French treatise on the Rights of Man, its paper margins covered with written comments. This blacksmith was not only a man of action, but a man of thought also. I lay down on the bench, pillowing my head on one arm, thinking of him as I first saw him kneeling alone in prayer, and the simple words of his petition came back to me with new power. Then my mind drifted to the strange com-

mingling of human elements in this adventure—to Mistress Claire, and her connection with Grant, and the intimate knowledge Farrell apparently possessed of them both. Somehow I was becoming more and more deeply involved in these lives, and I began to wonder how it was all destined to end. Was the coming night to add a new chapter? If so, would it be the last? Reviewing it all, lulled by the silence, I fell asleep.

To Democrats of the First District:

I am a candidate to represent the First Congressional District in Congress, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

It is not my purpose to write a platform. I shall make an active canvass of the District, and in speeches give my views upon public questions, but I desire now to give a brief general idea of the course I shall pursue, if so fortunate as to be elected to Congress.

It is useless to say I will support all sound Democratic measures, but I believe in progressive Democracy.

I believe the great question before the American people now is destroy special privileges and restore the government to the rule of the people, and at the same time safe-guard and protect all legitimate business enterprises, but that must be done.

Graft and grafters in both State and Nation must be weeded out, and I shall, if elected, make incessant war upon them both, whether found in the republican party, the prolific progenitor of such, or found parasite-like gnawing into the ranks of my own party.

I heartily endorse the State primary Election Law; the first step toward the rule of the people is to permit them to nominate their candidates for office. I favor the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

I shall, if elected to Congress, advocate economy in the expenditure of the people's money, but shall earnestly endeavor to secure such appropriations as may be necessary to improve and enlarge the levees on the Mississippi River as to protect life and property along its banks in Kentucky, and to secure such appropriations also as may be necessary for the proper improvement of the Cumberland, Tennessee and Ohio rivers, and other waterways, and shall give careful consideration to any other desired improvement to which my attention may be called. Public economy in my judgment, means honest expenditure of the people's money in a careful, business way, and does not consist in refusing to spend it when necessary for public improvements.

I shall strive for the uplift of labor and laboring people, for the encouragement of the farming interests of the country, and shall support measures tending to better their conditions.

Soliciting the vote and influence of every Democrat, I am,

Most sincerely,

DENNY P. SMITH.

Under the law granting pensions to the old soldiers their claims for pensions must be passed on by the county court of the county in which the applicant lives and then must be approved by the pension board at Frankfort.

APPALLING DISASTER

Greatest Atlantic Steamer Destroyed by Huge Iceberg.

1400 LIVES ARE LOST--866 RESCUED

When Ships Reach Scene of Disaster There Was Nothing But Debris and Collection of Lifeboats Into Which Women and Children Had Been Bundled.

New York.—It is reported by wireless from Cape Race that at least 1,314 persons went to their death in the sinking of the Titanic, which from now on will be known as the greatest maritime disaster of modern times. The liner, bearing the proud title of the largest vessel afloat, is at the bottom of the Atlantic with all of her crew and practically all of her male passengers. Probably 800 women were taken off the liner after her appalling collision with a submerged iceberg, and they are on the Carpathia, making for either Boston or New York.

It is feared that not one of the Titanic's passenger list of distinguished and wealthy men is alive. It is believed that not a man of the crew of the Titanic is left to tell of the epochal sea horror. A minute evidence of the disaster that overwhelmed the Titanic on her maiden trip is the comment of the captain of the Carpathia in a wireless message received:

"We found only a sea covered with wreckage and debris."

Vessels Rush to Aid.

The Carpathia's captain also said he had picked up the survivors in the boats and had sheltered them on board.

The giant boat, racing for America in an attempt to delight its distinguished passengers with a trip that would strike the world, hit the iceberg with terrific force. The impact was sufficient to tear great seams in the vessel's prow and open one or more water-tight compartments.

Fighting a losing battle, the pride of the maritime world went off to her doom.

At every wireless station on the Atlantic coast from New York to Cape Race vessels are bending over their instruments feeling for the pulsations of the marvelous telegraph waves that will bring further details of the catastrophe.

News of the sinking of the liner and the terrible loss of life in consequence came with all the greater shock because hope had been buoyed up all day by reports that the steamship, although badly damaged, was not in a sinking condition and that all her passengers had been safely taken off. The messages were mostly unofficial, however, and none came direct from the liner, so a lurking fear remained of possible bad news to come.

Shortly after 7 o'clock there came flashed over the wires from Cape Race, within 400 miles of which the liner had struck the iceberg, word that at 2:20 o'clock Monday morning, three hours and fifty-five minutes after receiving her death blow, the Titanic had sunk. The news came from the steamer Carpathia, relayed by the White Star liner Olympic, and revealed that by the time the Carpathia, outward bound from New York, and racing for the Titanic on a wireless call, reached the scene the doomed vessel had sunk.

Left on the surface, however, were lifeboats from the Titanic, and in them, as appears from the meager reports received up to a late hour, were some 675 survivors of the disaster. These, according to the advices, the Carpathia picked up.

For the rest, the scene as the Carpathia came up was one of desolation. All that remained of the $10,000,000 floating palace, on which nearly 1,400 passengers had been voyaging luxuriously to this side of the Atlantic, were some bits of wreckage. The biggest ship in the world had gone down, snuffing out in her downward plunge, it appears, hundreds of human lives.

All Saved Women.

A significant line in the Cape Race dispatch was the announcement that of those saved by the Carpathia, nearly all were women and children.

Should it prove that no other vessel picked up any passengers of the sinking liner, this might mean that few of the men on board had been saved, as the proportion of women and children among the passengers was large. The same facts would likewise spell the doom of the entire crew of about 800.

In the cabins were 230 women and children, but it is not known how many passengers.

In the first cabin there were 125 women and 15 children, and in the second cabin 79 women and 8 children. Notable persons, travelers on the Titanic, whose fate was in doubt in the lack of definite advices as to the identity of the survivors, were Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Maj. Archibald Butt, Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific of Canada, his wife and daughter; W. T. Stead, Benjamin Guggenheim, F. D. Millet, the artist, and J. G. Widener of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Straus, J. B. Thayer, vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad; J. Bruce Ismay, Henry B. Harris, the theatrical manager, and Mrs. Harris, and Col. Washington Roebling, builder of the Brooklyn bridge.

The collision of the Titanic with an iceberg is now known to have been a head-on crash that occurred while the liner was proceeding at little less than her best speed. She was a day ahead of her schedule, and it is considered probable that an attempt to make a record-breaking voyage was the hope of her crew when she entered the ice field.

Her forward plates were completely wrecked, a gaping wound opening below her water line and letting the water into her forward compartments.

In the meantime the lifeboats were manned and into them were placed as many of the women and children as they could hold. These boats were put off while there was yet some hope of holding the Titanic afloat until her wireless messages could summon help.

Col. Astor Drowned.

Later and more comprehensive messages tell of great bravery on the part of the men passengers. There was a minimum of disorder. John Jacob Astor, who, with his bride, was returning from their long honeymoon abroad, saw his bride placed in a lifeboat and safely away. Col. Astor was drowned.

The work of getting the lifeboats away, the work of allaying the fears of the great crowd of passengers as much as possible, the work of keeping the pumps in operation and the engine throbbing—these tasks and countless others were directed by Capt. Smith, the venerable commander of the Titanic and before her advent the commander of the Olympic, who displayed almost superhuman power of mind and body as the world's most horrible sea disaster crowned his long and honorable service on the high seas.

The Titanic struck the iceberg at 11:55 and foundered at 2:20. At daybreak the Carpathia arrived on the scene and her passengers and crew beheld only the small boats with their precious human cargoes and a dismal scene of wreckage.

"Sinking by the head and woman are being rushed into the lifeboats," were the last words that spluttered into the wireless room of the Virginian from the Titanic.

All through the night and until her wireless station was silenced over hundreds of miles of sea from the antennas of the giant liner flashed the mystic and magic "S. O. S." (Save, oh, save), the world-wide cry of distress on the ocean. Every wireless operator within range of the maimed vessel dropped her other messages to locate her and meanwhile relayed the fast three dots, three dashes and three dots to the world.

The collision occurred 1,350 miles east of New York and 450 miles south of Cape Race, the most westerly point of Newfoundland.

Relief on Way.

Contrary to earlier dispatches, there was no storm when the vessel struck. The weather was clear and the sea calm.

Almost as soon as the Virginian picked up the distress signal it was recorded by the operator on the Olympic, the Titanic's sister ship, and next to her the largest vessel afloat. This was at midnight. At that hour the Olympic was 200 miles from New York en route to Southampton.

The Baltic—famous for her rescue of the passengers of the steamer Republic and for her Jack Binns, who sat aloft and braved death to summon help—was the next ship to pick up the brief story of the Titanic's plight. She was on her way from New York to Liverpool, but turned about and put on full speed toward the Titanic's position.

Worst Fears Confirmed.

A wireless message from Capt. Haddock confirmed the fears of the White Star line officials that all but the 670 women and children who escaped in the small boats from the $10,000,000 steamship, had perished. A part of this message was withheld, but enough was divulged to the newspapers to make certain the appalling extent of the catastrophe.

Not until Capt. Haddock flashed, "Horrible disaster; all but 670 lost," would the White Star officials believe that the mightiest ship ever launched had gone down on her maiden voyage.

The scene in the White Star line offices was pitiful. Brought to a realization of the stupendous wreck—the complete destruction of the fruit of their dreams—gray-haired men, many of them veteran seamen, wept.

"Even if the Titanic reaches port here, owners will have to calculate on a loss of at least $750,000, but if she becomes a total loss it will be an extremely serious matter," was the opinion of the White Star line officials.

The vessel cost $10,000,000 to build. Her hull is valued for insurance purposes at $5,000,000. There are all sorts of miscellaneous matters to be taken into account for disbursements and for passage money for freights paid in advance. The vessel was carrying 2,200 passengers and 850 crew members, and other things valued for insurance purposes at $5,000,000. There are all sorts of miscellaneous matters to be taken into account for disbursements and for passage money and for freights paid in advance, as well as for stores, baggage and other things.

The Titanic Had Diamonds Aboard.

Valued at That Amount—Lost.

London.—The Titanic was insured by Lloyd's for $5,000,000.

No definite information is available as to the amount of valuables on board, but it is generally understood that the vessel took diamonds of the estimated value of $5,000,000, consigned to dealers. She also took a large amount of bonds. A member of a prominent firm of jewelers said:

COL. C. C. MENDEL HERE.
Optimistic About Flood.
Factory Will Resume Business.

Col. C. C. Mengel, the power behind the throne of the Mengel Box Co., his son, Frank, and Mr. Schleicher, arrived here from Louisville, Sunday, by special train to look into the results of the overflow as concerns the factory at this point.

Col. Mengel is not only a broad minded man, but is optimistic with it. He believes that a greater power than that of man contributes to such disasters as recently befell us, and the best thing to do is to accept it gracefully—smile the while—and go ahead. However great or small the loss, it remains the same—a thing that can't be helped by getting pessimistic. To his men, who naturally felt downcast and half-hearted over the loss to the company, the Colonel smilingly remarked "why, huss, you couldn't help this, nor could anyone. We'll just go right ahead now and shape things up and start the wheels moving again. It could have been a heap worse." The Colonel's view is the logical one; wist, we had a dozen such men interested in Hickman.

In short, the Mengel Box Co. will resume operations just as soon as the water gets out of the way. Col. Walker tells us that when they do get started again, they will want men, lots of them—more than they have employed heretofore—additional force will be needed for making repairs. In a short time, everything will be moving along as smoothly as though the flood never happened.

It might also be mentioned, too, that the next high water will find the Mengel factories properly protected. If the railroad company can't make a better levee than the one built last fall, Mengel will protect their plant with a concrete wall, like that portion now between their yards and the river. Col. Walker says a levee made of cinders don't go with them next time. But the railroad company could not well afford to be left on the outside of the new levee. First, they need the protection; second, it would cost them practically as much to raise their tracks to get over such a levee as it would cost to properly construct their part of it. At any rate, the matter of a West Hickman levee is going to be taken up at once. Lines will be run within the next 30 days, and the new embankment or concrete wall will go several feet higher than the 1912 high water mark.

I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

POULTRY NOTES

A good egg is a rare production. The breeding season will be upon us now before we have had time to think.

The Indian Runner duck is not inclined to fatten so readily as other varieties.

It is estimated that it requires the feathers from about ten ducks to make a pound.

Full fed hens, having a well balanced ration, will lay larger eggs than hens on stunted feed.

A warm house does not mean that it be air-tight. Laying hens must have fresh air at all times of the year.

By this time you should have your spring breeders and the cockerel with which they are to be mated selected.

The Indian Runner duck is not a new variety, although it is not as old as some of the other varieties of ducks.

Duck eggs are in demand by confectioners, as they impart a glaze to their icing, which cannot be had with hen eggs.

The critical period of the turkey is the first eight weeks of its life. About 48 eggs is the average yearly record of the hen.

With many flocks, the addition of an ample supply of meat to the ration will cause a marked increase in the size of the egg.

It takes lots of scheming and coaxing to get the hens to lay eggs this cold weather, but they are worth the price after you do get them.

Hens with plenty of exercise and comfortable surroundings lay heavier eggs than those in restricted quarters: often eggs 10 per cent heavier.

CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS

Hon. Denny P. Smith, of Trigg County

In this issue of the Courier appears the formal announcement of Hon. Denny P. Smith, of Trigg county, for Congress. Mr. Smith's entry into the race is of much interest to the Democrats of Fulton county, not only because of his known fitness and untiring efforts in behalf of the party, but because he has been one of the leaders in the fight to dehorn Fulton county's political brigands as well as the entire state gang. This fight has been won after a long struggle, and no little credit is due Mr. Smith. His fight against the element that would steal ballot boxes, conventions and do all sort of dirty tricks to feather their political nests, should in itself recommend him to the hearty favor and consideration of the honest voters of Fulton county.

Mr. Smith was born in Trigg county, forty-five years ago, on a farm, and labored on the farm in spring and summer seasons and in timber in fall and winter until he was nineteen years of age. He was educated in the Public Schools, Bowling Green Normal School and in Kentucky State College. At nineteen he taught Public School in the school district where he was born, and with proceeds spent two terms in Bowling Green Normal School. After that, in Sept. 1888, with between fifty and sixty dollars only, he entered the State College at Lexington and worked at odd hours on the Experiment farm at 10 cents per hour for three years to pay for books, clothes, etc. For one year more he assisted in the chemical department of the college at the same meagre wages, and the fifth year assisted in the Biological department and graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science in June 1893 with high honors. During the term of five years he carried all his expenses by hard labor, and so close was the contest to keep up his studies and at the same time keep the wolf from the door, that he had to remain there and work on the farm during the summer vacations, saving the means to go back to Trigg county to visit his aged father and mother only twice in five years.

He taught the Cadiz Public School three years after graduation and at the same time studied law under the instructions of Hon. Fenton Sims, and was admitted to the bar in 1895.

He was twice elected county attorney of Trigg county, and in 1903 was elected Commonwealth's Attorney of 3rd Judicial District, and was re-elected without opposition to the same office, which position he now holds. He has made an able and fearless prosecuting attorney and has endeavored himself to his people as none but a positive character with honest purpose could have done. His successful prosecution of the Acme Mills & Elevator Company cases, a prosecution involving the investigation of books covering more than seven millions of dollars of business transactions, to discover the guilt of the accused, has shown him a master of figures and detail as well as a strong, painstaking lawyer.

Trained in the school of hardship and labor, his sympathies are with the laboring people, and he has taken their side of every question. In Congress the people could have no more faithful representative.

Nothing need be said here of his Democracy or party service. His loyalty and ability have been shown in too many hard fights to require comment from us. Being a skillful politician of honest purpose and a man of scrupulous integrity he is a most valuable man to the struggling masses. With his experience and character no son of toil need fear the tricksters or schemers against the people's interest can either fool him or buy him.

Now in this fight we predict that he will be a most dangerous antagonist to any and all who may oppose him for the high honor of representing the Gibraltar District in Congress.

While the New York, St. Louis, Pennsylvania train No. 11 was rushing across Illinois Sunday night at a rate of 60 miles an hour, the engineer, William Larr, sat dead in the cab. His lifeless hand still clutched the throttle. Larr complained of feeling ill when the train left Terre Haute and before reaching Marshall, Ill., the fireman discovered he was dead. Larr's body was put off at Marshall. He had died of heart failure.
